Dear

Re: Your request for access to information under Part II of the Access to Information and Protection of Privacy Act (JPS/196/2018)

On October 17, 2018, the Department of Justice and Public Safety (JPS) received your request for access to the following records:

“On April 1, 1984 the Young Offenders' Act (YOA) was passed. Prior to this date, the province had "delinquent wards" and "neglected wards" in training schools. I am seeking any document which explains or discusses what happened or what would happen to the delinquent wards and neglected wards who were in the Province's Institutions located in Pleasantville and Torbay. Did the province house wards in secure custody facilities after the implementation of the YOA?”

Please be advised that the Deputy Minister for JPS has reviewed this request and the department has no responsive records. While there are no records, with the implementation of the YOA, secure custody was only used for youth remanded or convicted of offenses. To JPS' knowledge, it did not encompass youth who were neglected or in care under the Child Protection Act.

While JPS does not have any records, it is possible that the department of Children, Seniors and Social Development may have records, therefore, you may wish to submit a request to the department.

Please be advised that you may ask the Information and Privacy Commissioner to review the processing of your access request as set out in section 42 of the Act (a copy of this section of the Act has been enclosed for your reference). A request to the Commissioner must be made in writing within 15 business days of the date of this letter or within a longer period that may be allowed by the Commissioner.

The appeal may be addressed to the Information and Privacy Commissioner as follows:

Toll-Free: 1-877-729-6309

You may also appeal directly to the Supreme Court within 15 business days after you receive the decision of the public body, pursuant to section 52 of the Act (a copy of this section of the Act has been enclosed for your reference).
